RESOLUTION

Honoring the life and accomplishments of the late Ann
Richards, former Governor of Texas.

Whereas Ann Richards was elected Governor of Texas in 1990 and was a role model for women in politics and for women throughout the Nation;

Whereas Ann Richards was the first woman elected Governor of Texas in her own right, rather than as a successor to her spouse or a male Governor who died, resigned, or was impeached;

Whereas in 1976, Ann Richards was elected to her first government office, defeating an incumbent to become the county commissioner of Travis County, Texas;

Whereas in 1982, Ann Richards became the first woman elected to a statewide office in Texas in over 50 years when she was elected to her first statewide office as the State treasurer, a position to which she was reelected 4 years later;

Whereas in 1988, Ann Richards delivered the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention, which catapulted her to fame as a national political figure and included her critique of then Vice President George H.W. Bush as well as her coining of the famous phrase: “Ginger Rogers did everything Fred Astaire did. She just did it backwards and in high heels.”;

Whereas Ann Richards declared her Governor’s administration to be the “New Texas” and, in the interest of diversifying the State government to better represent the population of Texas, appointed more women, African-Americans, and Hispanics to commissions and State boards than any previous Governor of Texas;

Whereas Ann Richards’s indomitable wit, spirit, intelligence, tenacity, and sense of civic duty helped propel her to the highest office in Texas and solidified her as a nationally known leader;

Whereas Ann Richards was a pioneer for women in politics and other fields, and helped shatter social barriers that held women back from powerful roles in government and business; and
