MILITARY AND NAVAL MATTERS - CUBA

#211,326
Classified by SP6 BJA/gcl
Declassify on: OADR 1/15/86

Enclosed herewith are 9 copies of a letterhead memorandum, dated and captioned as above, at Miami, Fla.

MM T-1 is former HAV-35, a very competent investigator, member of the Cuban National Police from 1934 to 1957, and a private investigator closely associated with the police thereafter.

He is not a military man and makes no attempt to enumerate the weapons, or give technical descriptions of them; however, it is felt that his descriptions of the various branches of the Armed Forces, their training, indoctrination, functions, and morale, afford an interesting and probably accurate insight into the state of the Cuban Armed Forces.

The following information was reported by MM T-1 on October 30, 1961. This source is a former Cuban investigator(s) associated with the Cuban National Police from 1934(s) who has furnished reliable information in the past. He arrived very recently from Havana, Cuba. (X) (S)

THE CUBAN REVOLUTIONARY NAVY

MM T-1 stated this branch of the armed forces of Cuba has never enjoyed the full confidence of FIDEL CASTRO. Source pointed out that many of his officers began to defect in 1959, and in the early Spring of 1960, a series of defections began to occur amongst his Naval officers who represented Cuba as Naval Attaches or Assistant Naval Attaches in foreign countries. Notable amongst these were the Naval Attaches of Cuba assigned to Venezuela, Mexico and the United States.

MM T-1 further recalled that many of the officers and men of the Revolutionary Navy had defected within Cuba and in some cases complete Naval units, including both men and officers, had defected and fled to the United States.

The principal work performed by the Revolutionary Navy at this time is that of extending a thin and ineffective patrol surveillance off of the North coast of Cuba, with the
